BRITISH RAID COASTAL AREAS HELD BY NAZIS; DUCE TAKES DJIBOUTI

DARING PARTIES CLAIM SUCCESS

Picked Men Wreck Vital Military Objectives

LONDON, June 26—A series of daring raids by picked British troops on German military positions along the French coast were announced in a brief communique by the British war office today.

Landings were made at several points, the announcement said. While few details were given, it was understood the raiders successfully demolished certain important Nazi military objectives along the channel.

The spectacular new offensive by sea and air was made known as the British Isles counted four dead and 13 injured in violent German air raids last night.

An official communique disclosing the new British offensive operations said:

"In cooperation with the Royal Air Force, naval and military raiders yesterday carried out successful reconnaissance of the enemy coastline.

"Landings were effected at a number of points, contact made with German troops and casualties inflicted.

"Some enemy dead fell into our hands and much useful information was obtained.

"Our forces suffered no casualties."

Information Lacking

The communique did not disclose where the landings were made or how many men were involved. Nor did it state whether any landing parties were left in German-controlled territory or whether the British returned home when their mission was completed.

The landing might have taken place anywhere from the northern tip of Norway to the west coast of France, for the German coastline now embraces this huge amount of territory.

(Editor's Note: Military experts thought it likely that the raids were directed against the channel ports of France. Landing of troops would enable demolition work to be carried out at specified points without the scattered damage usually resulting from aerial bombing raids. In this connection, it was considered highly probable that Britain would refrain as much as possible from bombing raids on French (Continued on Page Three)

TOM DEWEY BELIEVES MAN'S WORD HIS BOND

PHILADELPHIA, June 26—Thomas E. Dewey believes that in politics, as elsewhere, a man's word is his bond.

Remarking on his talks with various delegates, Dewey said he had not asked whether they would support him not only on the first ballot but on subsequent polls as well.

He observed: "I never ask people a question of that kind. If they're for me, I assume that they'll stick."

DEBT-FOR-FLEET MOVE ATTACKED

Solons Hit 'Balloon' Sent Up By White House As Detrimental To U. S.

WASHINGTON, June 26—The new "big three" of the senate's Democratic isolationists—Wheeler of Montana, Clark of Idaho, and Holt of West Virginia—swung into line today to block any attempt by President Roosevelt to cancel the French World War debt to the United States in exchange for the French navy.

"That was a trial balloon, sent up by the administration to test sentiment on the project," was the trio's general reaction to President's statement yesterday that the White House has received thousands of communications urging the exchange.

Wheeler, the Idaho Clark, and Holt—often at odds on other issues—have joined forces recently with increasing frequency to lead the Democratic "stay-out-of-the-war" bloc in the senate. They were joined today by Republican (Continued on Page Three)

FORD TO BUILD NEW MOTORS FOR U. S., NOT BRITAIN

DEARBORN, Mich., June 26—Although the federal government has cancelled plans for mass production of airplane motors by his company, Henry Ford today reaffirmed his stand that he is ready to manufacture "as many planes and as many motors as the United States wants—any time it wants them."

Ford made his statement as an announcement of the National Defense Advisory Council that his refusal to manufacture airplane motors for the British Government will cause the council to "look elsewhere" for cooperation in the production of 9,000 Rolls Royce engines.

"We have something to offer our government any time they want it," Ford said. "I said that I can build 1,000 airplanes a day, and I can do it."

Amplifying Ford's reply, a spokesman for the Ford Motor Company said:

"When Mr. Ford made the announcement that he could build 1,000 planes a day he intended they should be for the United States Government. At no time did he promise to build planes or motors for the British."

FOUR YOUTHS KILLED

PORTSMOUTH, June 26—Four southern Ohio youths were killed Wednesday when their automobile collided with a truck in Atway between Portsmouth and Cincinnati. Two of the youths were sons of M. M. Martin, N. & W. agent at Atway. The identity of the other two was not learned immediately.

ITALY CONTROLS TRAFFIC IN SEA

Peace Pact Gives Axis Partner Vital Areas

ROME, June 26—Soldiers of Fascist Italy today began taking over positions of strategic importance in French Mediterranean and African territories, as Rome and Berlin moved swiftly to concentrate their joint power in a tremendous assault against England, their sole remaining adversary.

As provided for by the Italo-French armistice agreement, officially revealed last night, Italian troops today began taking over control of Djibouti, key port of French Somaliland, as well as the vital Djibouti-Addis Ababa railway.

Simultaneously, Italy was placed in positions of tactical importance which threatened effectively to bottle up the British fleets and naval bases in the Mediterranean, stopping English maritime traffic to India and the Far East by way of the short route via the Gibraltar-Mediterranean-Suez-Red Sea route.

Thus Italy today stands in position to cripple the British Empire while Chancellor Hitler hurls the might of Nazi Germany directly against the British Isles.

Terms of the Franco-Italian truce closely paralleled those of the Franco-German armistice. Details of both were revealed last night in Berlin and Rome.

Terms Announced

Under the armistice terms, which England termed "harsh and humiliating," French frontier areas ranging from 30 to 120 miles in depth must be demilitarized.

Italian troops which fought their way into southeastern France and the Riviera are to remain in occupation of those areas for the duration of the war between the Rome-Berlin Allies and Britain.

ITALIANS CLAIM RAID ON NAPLES DISTRICT BALKED

ROME, June 26—British bombers attempting to raid Naples were driven off by Italian fighting planes, it was officially announced today.

Likewise, enemy bombers attacking Asmara and Dire Dawa also were driven away before they could cause any damage.

BRIEF HAILSTORM FAILS TO HURT COUNTY CROPS

Farm officials declared Wednesday following a checkup in surrounding territory that a hailstorm that swept the district Tuesday afternoon failed to cause any material damage. The storm was too brief to do much damage, they said.

The half-inch rain that accompanied the hail boosted the district's total to 3.6 inches for June. County Agent F. K. Blair and Conservation Chairman John G. Boggs made a survey of farms in the Circleville community before they announced that damage, if any, was small.

ANTI-WAR PLANK O.K. ASSURED

Republicans To Charge F. D. Has "Failed America"; Isolationists Win

PHILADELPHIA, June 26—The Republican convention met today to approve an outspoken platform which charges "the New Deal has failed America," brands the Democratic administration as tending "to involve us in war" and firmly opposes any such involvement.

Approved except for final phrasing by the resolutions committee, the document makes certain that the presidential campaign this fall will be fought out primarily on a war-versus-peace issue. The full convention was to receive the platform late today. Since it has been approved by both leading isolationists as well as Allied sympathizers, no opposition is expected.

As a special drafting committee met behind closed doors to polish up the final wording, details of the controversial foreign policy plank became known. This, as tentatively written, declares:

"The Republican party is the party of Americanism, preparedness and peace. We accordingly fasten on the New Deal full responsibility for our unpreparedness (Continued on Page Three)

AMERICAN LOSS IN EUROPE MAY BE $500,000,000

WASHINGTON, June 26—American financial losses in Nazi-dominated territories in Europe may reach $500,000,000, Commerce Department officials estimated today.

These losses are expected to result from German control of American long-term investments in plants, securities and various real properties in various European countries which have been conquered by the Nazi war machine.

Officials predict that American business probably will be forced to "write off" these investments since German economy does not make any concessions to foreign capital.

Amounts of investments which may be classified as losses, in the opinion of commerce officials, include: Germany, $228,000,000; Austria, $6,000,000; Czechoslovakia, $5,000,000; Poland, $34,000,000; Denmark, $14,000,000; Norway, $27,000,000; Holland, $19,000,000; Belgium, $35,000,000 and possibly France, $146,000,000.

American industry has received no financial return on its investment in Germany for some years, since the Nazi system of exchange control permits practically no currency to be paid out to foreigners.

U. S. MINES PANAMA DISTRICT; LOCATION OF FLEET UNKNOWN

Both Sides Of Canal Protected In Case Of Emergency; Soldiers On "Alert"

BALBOA, C. Z., June 26—With mine fields laid to protect both Atlantic and Pacific approaches to the Panama Canal, the entire Canal Zone armed forces today were placed on virtually a wartime basis and batteries of coast artillery were moved to strengthen American defenses at both ends of the waterway across the Isthmus.

Two batteries of 14-inch coast artillery guns have been transferred from the Pacific side to the Atlantic to strengthen the latter position, and military authorities admitted that mine-layers have sown a mine field at both approaches to the canal.

They refused, however, to explain the action or to say whether the mines are loaded or are soon to be picked up.

Meanwhile, the 30,000 soldiers in the Canal Zone became, in military parlance, "on the alert," and it was learned that since last week end air corps men in the zone have been ordered to stand by for call to duty without warning day or night.

The Italian liner Conte Biancamano, tied up in Balboa's outer harbor since Italy's entry into the war, transited the canal yesterday without incident. It is believed that she will stay indefinitely in Cristobal Harbor, but local quarters were at loss to explain the ship's sudden decision to move through the canal.

WASHINGTON, June 26—As Japanese political threats to assume a "protectorate" over French and Dutch possessions in the Far East were intensified today, the U. S. battle fleet was reported enroute from Hawaii to an unknown destination.

What connection there is between these two facts—if any—was a matter of the deepest official secrecy. For the first time in the memory of contemporary capital observers, the White House, state department and Navy Department refused to give the slightest indication of the destination or purpose of a major fleet movement.

All factual information came from Hawaii, where residents saw the mighty floating fortresses of the battle fleet moving majestically out to sea. From their easterly direction it was assumed there that they were going either to their San Pedro, Cal., home (Continued on Page Three)

AKRON STRIKERS VOTE TO RETURN TO RUBBER FIRM

AKRON, June 26—Employees of the General Tire & Rubber Co., were back at work today after voting 548-119 to end the 11-week strike and accept the terms of a new contract completed through the efforts of the United States Department of Labor.

The contract, to run for one year, included vacation with pay, said H. D. Dawson, international representative of the CIO United Mine Workers, who was in charge of the strike.

Although wages and hours remain the same, the union claimed that grievances of wage chiseling and the six-hour day are to be negotiated after work is resumed. The company and union were both urged to agree on terms in order to prepare for government rearmament does. Besides manufacturing tires, General has been making gas masks.

Ex-President Brands New Deal As "War Party"; Draws Applause With Bitter Attacks On Roosevelt Policies

PHILADELPHIA, June 26—A spontaneous move to draft Taft and Dewey spread today among delegates to the Republican National Convention, as they prepared to approve a decisive anti-war platform before listening to nominating speeches.

The movement for a Robert E. Taft-Thomas E. Dewey ticket came from the unbossed delegates who are dead-set against the nomination of Wendell Willkie—and they may act on their own initiative from the floor of the convention if the coalition is not offered them shortly.

Manager of the Taft, Dewey and Willkie camps meanwhile saw no threats to their campaigns in the convention appearance of former President Herbert Hoover. The ex-president came, was seen, but failed to conquer.

His first had been heralded by his friends as affording an opportunity to stampee the convention to his renomination. Actually Hoover impressed his audience as a tired veteran statesman. He was given several ovations and his speech an excellent reception, but it created no demand to draft him.

Speech His Greatest

Many delegates thought Hoover made the greatest speech of his career, so far as the words he uttered were valued. But these same delegates observed that his delivery fell far short of that night in Cleveland four years ago when he brought another convention to its feet time and again, cheering madly. He might have had a nomination that night, but 1940 will pass him by.

WILLKIE FORCES WIN STASSEN AS NEW SUPPORTER

PHILADELPHIA, June 26—Governor Harold E. Stassen, keynote speaker of the Republican national convention, today issued a statement, announcing that he would cast his ballot for Wendell Willkie for the presidential nomination.

PHILADELPHIA, June 26—Wendell L. Willkie today launched a drive to capture some of the 60 New York state delegates who remain pledged to Thomas E. Dewey. Willkie met with leaders of his New York bloc as Dewey delegates reported increasing pressure from their home districts to switch their allegiance from the youthful prosecutor to the utilities magnate.

STATE HUNTING REGULATION SET FOR NEXT FALL

COLUMBUS, June 26—The Ohio Conservation and Natural Resources Commission today formally adopted hunting regulations for the 1939-1940 season, throwing out the "staggered" season of last year.

Under the new regulations, the pheasant and Hungarian partridge season will open November 15 and close 15 days later on November 30. Last year, hunting of birds and rabbits for the first few weeks was limited to Wednesdays, Thursdays, Fridays and Saturdays.

Much opposition to the "staggered" season was aired at a meeting of the commission June 13. Under the new plan, the hunting season virtually will be the same as two years ago.

The open season on rabbits will begin November 15 and continue to January 1 and that on raccoon from November 15 to January 15. No season was set for Red fox pending further discussion.

The commission also adopted orders opening the Charles Mills Reservoir and the Portage and Springfield lakes to fishing at noon, June 30. An appropriation of $1,000 to purchase material needed for conservation work in public schools also was approved.

Possibility Of Assistance From Pennsylvania Noted By Speakers

By Carl Turner

PHILADELPHIA, June 26 — Ohio delegates and national convention visitors today began an "infiltration drive" to bring the Republican presidential nomination to their favorite son, U. S. Senator Robert A. Taft.

Led by Gov. John W. Bricker, chairman of the delegation of 52, and Congressman George H. Bender, of Cleveland, official "cheer leader" of the Taft forces, hundreds of Buckeye state convention visitors contacted everyone within reach wearing a badge of a delegate from another state. The drive was launched after Senator Taft, addressing a giant Ohio pep rally, told his supporters that "a very large number of delegates have not yet made up their minds how they will vote."

"There are also a great many others who appear to make up their minds every day," Taft added.

His campaign managers expressed confidence the Ohioan will be nominated on an early ballot, and talk of Thomas E. Dewey joining the ticket as vice presidential nominee in an effort to block off Wendell L. Willkie pervaded Taft headquarters.

Possible Charge Cited

As time for balloting neared a canvass revealed that if Gov. Arthur H. James fails to gain after the first ballot and Willkie and Dewey fail to win the nomination, a large block of Pennsylvania votes, perhaps fifty, may swing to Taft once the Keystone state leaders are convinced James' race is futile. Two James' leaders denied reports of a possible deal to support Taft for president in return for second spot for Pennsylvania's governor.

Referring to the pressure drives and theatrical approaches of some opponents, Taft asserted confidently:

"The delegates will finally reach a conclusion through logic and not emotion."

Adding to prestige of the Taft cause were appearances at a pep rally of U. S. Sen. Arthur Capper of Kansas, an outstanding farm leader, and Richard Scandrett, New York attorney defeated for congress in 1938 on the same ticket with Dewey, then gubernatorial aspirant.

Capper lauded the Ohioan and said "all Kansas delegates like Bob" although he avoided a declaration that Taft would receive the Kansas vote. The delegation will give Capper a complimentary vote, but the senator said he did not take the gesture "very seriously."

Scandrett, in declaring for Taft, called both Dewey and Willkie his friends but said the Ohioan would make a better candidate. He called Taft the most remarkable vote-getter in Republican party, citing his overwhelming defeat of U. S. Sen. Robert Bulkley, staunch New Deal supporter, two years ago.

Willkie as Democrat

In a lighter vein Scandrett said the "only argument against Willkie is that if Republicans do not nominate him he may go after the Democratic nomination in July."

He said the Willkie movement "looks like a revival of the Liberty League," adding that "Willkie obviously is a candidate of the district where I work — Wall Street."

"Willkie," he said, "goes further along the objectionable path

An observation visit Tuesday to the newly acquired workshop of E. F. Martin up near the village council house, and used for years by the late Taylor Brintlinger, told us without asking any questions that the place is being rebuilt and arranged to meet the plans of the new proprietor.

The pea pack at the local cannery is nearing the end for the season, Thursday, maybe, will be the close depending on weather conditions. This year's pack both in quantity and quality is among the very best yet harvested here.

The Ashville Community Club will hold a session with business along Fourth of July celebration lines, this coming Friday evening at the Mrs. Pontius dining room. A banquet will be served. The several committees named at the last meeting to attend to the division activities connected with the Fourth celebration, are requested to attend this meeting without fail and make report.

He was a stranger in these parts and we opened up "the third" gently about the weather and the absence of the barber who'd be in soon. Found him to be a native of Urbana here on a visit to his son Paul Bozeman and his family. In wanting to know about his occupation in his home town, told us he was a retired rural mail carrier out of Urbana and had served thirty-two years at it, a part of which time was in the horse and wagon days. Knew the Coon brothers, Clint and Clarence, very well, in business there and was surprised to learn that this was their native home. So we're adding another friendly one to our long list of fine people whose business we have had to know all about.

OHIOANS START DRIVE TO GAIN HELP FOR TAFT

BRICKER HALTS CAMPAIGN FOR HIS SELECTION

PHILADELPHIA, June 26 — Gov. John W. Bricker of Ohio today indignantly repudiated the opening of "headquarters" booming him for president and Gov. Francis Murphy of New Hampshire for vice president.

A location on a busy downtown street suddenly bloomed forth with a rash of placards advertising the alleged Bricker-Murphy ticket late yesterday. Governor Bricker, supporting Senator Robert A. Taft of his home state, said his name had been used without permission, adding:

"When I heard of it, I said close it up and get my name out of it immediately."

Practically one-fourth of the public school teachers of the United States have no retirement or disability security whatsoever.

of the New Deal than it went itself."

From Cleveland came Mayor Harold Burton, G.O.P. nominee for U. S. senator from Ohio, to throw his weight into the Taft scales.

"Bob Taft stands up under every test," said Burton. "Let the delegates think of the seriousness of their task and they will nominate him."

Governor Bricker was unable to attend the pep meeting, but Congressman Bender gave assurance the governor, often mentioned as a compromise presidential candidate, is "going the whole way and then some" for Senator Taft.

"Bricker is president of stick-to-Taft-to-the-Finish Club," shouted Bender. He added that Taft "has not lost a single delegate pledged to him" since raids by Willkie on delegates of leading candidates began.

Taft managers eyed with unconcealed interest the outcome of Kentucky's contest for national committeeman scheduled for a showdown today. If John Perkins, of Frankfort, should be re-elected certain Kentucky leaders forecast a bandwagon movement to Taft. The 22 Kentucky votes are understood to be about evenly divided between Taft and Dewey at the moment, with no Willkie strength evident. Perkins heads the faction favorable to Taft and Congressman John Robison the pro-Dewey group.

DELEGATES MAY NAME OHIO MAN TO LEAD PARTY

States into any foreign war—except to defend American shores against invasion.

The ex-president drew his greatest applause when he said:

"We must develop and maintain foreign policies that keep us out of these wars unless we are attacked."

His second greatest response came after he declared the New Deal's expenditure of vast sums in election years, when he said:

"At the end of this debate, we ought to have an election, not an auction."

And after pledging the Republicans to battle against the "totalitarian liberalism" of the New Deal, he won another great cheer, when he said:

"This is a battle which Americans better not lose."

It was a really great speech but its delivery can be understood by the remark of one delegate: "If the Hoover who talked to us at Cleveland had made that speech tonight, the story would be different."

"Willkie Stopped"

The demand for a Taft-Dewey ticket arose among delegates while leaders of other camps were asserting again that "Willkie has been stopped." The Willkie boom has slowed down, despite tremendous pressure from outside Philadelphia. Even the letter barrage is ending. Now, Willkie seems to be on his own in securing delegates and the western revolt against him possibly has ended his raids on other camps.

There has been much talk of a Taft-Dewey coalition although their managers deny having even considered it. Despite their denials, an authoritative source says that David Angell, chief Taft manager, has been consulting with Mrs. Ruth Pratt, national committee woman from New York and a Dewey manager.

The Taft and Dewey managers says there can be no talk of a deal until after a few "shakedown ballots" in the convention. Both sides want to see just how strong the other fellow is on two or three ballots. Actually, the Taft managers hope Dewey, will lose heavily by the third ballot while Taft holds his own, in which event a deal would be much easier to negotiate — against the ever-present Willkie threat.

Rival first ballot claims show that Dewey should lead the first time the convention votes. A survey today of the different headquarters show they expect these totals:

Dewey, 350—despite claims of 380 to 400.
Taft, 300—Despite claims of 334.
Willkie, 144—despite claims of 170.

The manager of one "dark horse" candidate, who asked that his identity be concealed, has had a careful poll made of all delegations for the first three ballots. His poll shows Dewey leading on the first ballot, but replaced by Taft on the second and third.

ITALY CONTROLS TRAFFIC IN SEA

mailland is to be demilitarized under Italian supervision, as well as broad regions of French Algeria and Tunisia.

French naval bases and harbor works at Toulon, in the Mediterranean, and three other bases in French North Africa, also are to be demilitarized.

Patterned after the Franco-German truce, the Italo-French armistice helps to immobilize France and also contains some important provisions not included in the Berlin-Bordeaux agreement.

It provides that Italian troops in France are to remain "on their advanced lines in all theatres of operations" until a final peace treaty is concluded.

Under one of the most salient clauses of the truce, Italy obtained an outlet to the sea for conquered Abyssinia in a clause of the armistice which provided:

"Italy shall have the full and constant right to use the port of Djibouti and all its equipment, together with the French section of the Djibouti-Addis Ababa railroad, for all kinds of transport."

In other major respects, the Italo-French armistice closely corresponds with the Franco-German truce, except in regard to provisions affecting North Africa, the Alpine region and the Mediterranean coastal areas where French and Italian interests meet.

Big Areas Demilitarized
The Franco-Italian armistice was accompanied by attached maps fixing the lines of the French areas to be demilitarized, and these include a 30-mile-wide belt in front of the Italian battle lines in the southeastern French Alpine border region as well as wider strips along the Libyan-Algerian frontier. The whole coast of French Somaliland also is to be demilitarized.

All areas to be demilitarized must be evacuated of French troops within ten days, although skeleton forces for policing purposes will be permitted to remain.

The truce provides that as a guarantee of execution of the terms "Italy may demand surrender of the whole or part of the collective French arms, infantry, artillery, armored cars, tanks, transport vehicles and ammunition belonging to units engaged with or facing Italian forces."

As with the Franco-German truce, the Italo-French agreement provides for disarming of the French navy under Italo-German control in certain ports, except for those units designated to "safeguard French colonial territories."

As did the Reich, Italy promised not to use any French warships for belligerent purposes, and not to claim any part of the French navy after the war with Britain is concluded.

France also undertook "to prevent her armed forces and citizens generally from leaving its national territory to partake in hostilities against Italy." She also undertook to prevent her "warships, airplanes, arms and war materials" from being conveyed to Britain. French merchantmen must remain at their ports until the Rome-Berlin axis partners permit resumption of maritime activities, and merchant ships not in French ports must be recalled or directed to neutral harbors. Captured Italian vessels must be returned to Italy.

As under the agreement with the Reich, the truce with Italy also forbids French airplanes from leaving French territory. Radio broadcasting is forbidden in areas not occupied by Germany or Italy.

Italian prisoners held by France, as well as Italian civilians interned, must be handed over to Italy immediately. Italy, however, is to retain her French captives pending conclusion of final peace terms.

territory now held by the Germans in keeping with Prime Minister Winston Churchill's expressed hope that the French people ultimately will rebel against the peace accepted by the Petain government and join again in war against the Reich.

Earlier, the air ministry had announced a series of blistering raids on German-controlled airports such as Waalhaven, near Rotterdam.

Chancellor Hitler's air raiders loosed their incendiary and high explosive bombs over coastal England, the Midlands, Wales and southern Scotland, but an official statement declared there was "no serious damage to military objectives and damage to property appears to be not serious while casualties were slight."

Five of the attacking German planes were reported shot down, either by Royal Air Force fighters or by anti-aircraft batteries from the ground.

A sixth bomber was believed shot down in Wales.

Civilians in the southeast area of Scotland experienced a thrilling few moments when they witnessed a terrible air duel between a British fighter and a Nazi bomber in the glare of anti-aircraft searchlights.

Tracer Bullets Watched
Red streaks of tracer bullets finding their mark in the huge German bombing plane could be seen from the ground, but finally a second R.A.F. fighter joined the fray and the battling planes zoomed out of sight.

A similar scene was witnessed in northeast England, where British fighters engaged one bomber while a second Nazi plane dumped its load of explosives and beat a hasty retreat.

In Wales several bombs were dropped.

In the Midlands and in Southwestern England, the populace twice returned to air raid shelters until Nazi raiders were dispersed.

Two fatal casualties occurred when a bomb registered a direct hit on a dwelling on southeast Scotland. Two others were seriously injured by the same explosion. A third fatality occurred in the Midlands, where six additional persons were hurt.

The Germans crossed the North Sea and the English Coast shortly after midnight, and an official air ministry communique revealed:

"Enemy aircraft crossed the coast during the night and anti-aircraft guns went into action."

The regional commissioner at Edinburgh reported:

"During an air raid in the early hours over southeast Scotland, bombs were dropped on several districts. Fighters and anti-aircraft guns went into action, and three bombers were shot down."

HARVEST IN FAYETTE MAY BEGIN THIS WEEK

WASHINGTON, C. H., June 26—Wheat harvest in Fayette County may begin late this week if the weather is favorable, it was reported Wednesday, as farmers hoped there would be no more storms to damage wheat fields, many already suffering from wind and rain.

Agricultural authorities believed, however, it would be a week or ten days before much wheat is marketed. Last year the first grain reached Fayette County elevators June 29, at least a week earlier than can be expected this season. There is reported to be considerable difference in the quality of wheat in different parts of the county, some fields containing many blasted heads.

isolationists in branding the navy-for-debt exchange as fantastic and "a certain step to war."

"The President's program is already pointing to war," Holt said, "but if this plan were carried out I am certain that we would be forced into war."

All three senators agreed that the exchange would immediately place the United States in "serious difficulties," in view of reports that the French fleet is to be turned over to Germany as part of the armistice terms agreed on by the two countries.

Holt said that Germany would be almost certain to view the acquisition of French war vessels by the United States "as an act of war." Thus the United States would be put in the position of "having to defend her actions."

Wheeler and Clark asserted that under the armistice terms they doubted whether any French vessels have "escaped," but emphasized that they were ready to oppose the plan should any attempt be made to carry it out.

"The Republican party is firmly opposed to involving this country in foreign wars . . .

The plank goes on to recognize aid to these "oppressed people"—but only if such aid "is not in violation of international law, federal law, or the requirements of our own defense." It assails "utterances of the chief executive which might lead to war."

In addition, the foreign stand pledges the Republicans to uphold the Monroe Doctrine and to build up the nation's defenses.

Adoption of this foreign plank by the committee came as a distinct victory for the isolationists—a victory won after days of bitter star-chamber conferences.

DELEGATES MAY NAME OHIO MAN TO LEAD PARTY

States into any foreign war—except to defend American shores against invasion.

The ex-president drew his greatest applause when he said:

"We must develop and maintain foreign policies that keep us out of these wars unless we are attacked."

His second greatest response came after he decided the New Deal's expenditure of vast sums in election years, when he said:

"At the end of this debate, we ought to have an election, not an auction."

And after pledging the Republicans to battle against the "totalitarian liberalism" of the New Deal, he won another great cheer, when he said:

"This is a battle which Americans better not lose."

It was a really great speech but its delivery can be understood by the remark of one delegate: "If the Hoover who talked to us at Cleveland had made that speech tonight, the story would be different."

"Willkie Stopped"

The demand for a Taft-Dewey ticket arose among delegates while leaders of other camps were asserting again that "Willkie has been stopped." The Willkie boom has slowed down, despite tremendous pressure from outside Philadelphia. Even the letter barrage is ending. Now, Willkie seems to be on his own in securing delegates and the western revolt against him possibly has ended his raids on other camps.

There has been much talk of a Taft-Dewey coalition although their managers deny having even considered it. Despite their denials, an authoritative source says that David Angell, chief Taft manager, has been consulting with Mrs. Ruth Pratt, national committee woman from New York and a Dewey manager.

The Taft and Dewey managers says there can be no talk of a deal until after a few "shakedown ballots" in the convention. Both sides want to see just how strong the other fellow is on two or three ballots. Actually, the Taft managers hope Dewey, will lose heavily by the third ballot while Taft holds his own, in which event a deal would be much easier to negotiate — against the ever-present Willkie threat.

Rival first ballot claims show that Dewey should lead the first time the convention votes. A survey today of the different headquarters show they expect these totals:

Dewey, 350—despite claims of 350 to 400.

Taft, 300—Despite claims of 334.

Willkie, 144—despite claims of 170.

The manager of one "dark horse" candidate, who asked that his identity be concealed, has had a careful poll made of all delegations for the first three ballots. His poll shows Dewey leading on the first ballot, but replaced by Taft on the second and third.

GIRL SCOUT NEWS

Members of Girl Scout Troop No. 4 had a meeting June 25 at the Methodist Church. The girls received their membership cards.

Miss Ruth Stout, assistant leader, told us about the Girl Scout party at Mrs. Simon Lazarus' home in Columbus. Prof. Harlan Hatcher presented a book review.

There will be practice at 2 and 2:30 p. m. Thursday after which we will hike to Gold Cliff Park.

The Girl Scout Troop No. 4 donated $1 to the Youth Hostel. The Youth Hostel asks anyone who has old chairs or benches that they cannot use to donate them as they are needed for this week end.

territory now held by the Germans in keeping with Prime Minister Winston Churchill's expressed hope that the French people ultimately will rebel against the peace accepted by the Petain government and join again in war against the Reich.)

Earlier, the air ministry had announced a series of blistering raids on German-controlled airports such as Waalhaven, near Rotterdam.

Chancellor Hitler's air raiders loosed their incendiary and high explosive bombs over coastal England, the Midlands, Wales and southern Scotland, but an official statement declared there was "no serious damage to military objectives and damage to property appears to be not serious while casualties were slight."

Five of the attacking German planes were reported shot down, either by Royal Air Force fighters or by anti-aircraft batteries from the ground.

A sixth bomber was believed shot down in Wales.

Civilians in the southeast area of Scotland experienced a thrilling few moments when they witnessed a terrible air duel between a British fighter and a Nazi bomber in the glare of anti-aircraft search-lights.

Tracer Bullets Watched

Red streaks of tracer bullets finding their mark in the huge German bombing plane could be seen from the ground, but finally a second R.A.F. fighter joined the fray and the battling planes zoomed out of sight.

A similar scene was witnessed in northeast England, where British fighters engaged one bomber while a second Nazi plane dumped its load of explosives and beat a hasty retreat.

In Wales several bombs were dropped.

In the Midlands and in Southwestern England, the populace twice returned to air raid shelters until Nazi raiders were dispersed.

Two fatal casualties occurred when a bomb registered a direct hit on a dwelling on southeast Scotland. Two others were seriously injured by the same explosion. A third fatality occurred in the Midlands, where six additional persons were hurt.

The Germans crossed the North Sea and the English Coast shortly after midnight, and an official air ministry communique revealed:

"Enemy aircraft crossed the coast during the night and anti-aircraft guns went into action."

The regional commissioner at Edinburgh reported:

"During an air raid in the early hours over southeast Scotland, bombs were dropped on several districts. Fighters and anti-aircraft guns went into action, and three bombers were shot down."

HARVEST IN FAYETTE MAY BEGIN THIS WEEK

WASHINGTON, C. H., June 26—Wheat harvest in Fayette County may begin late this week if the weather is favorable, it was reported Wednesday, as farmers hoped there would be no more storms to damage wheat fields, many already suffering from wind and rain.

Agricultural authorities believed, however, it would be a week or ten days before much wheat is marketed. Last year the first grain reached Fayette County elevators June 29, at least a week earlier than can be expected this season.

There is reported to be considerable difference in the quality of wheat in different parts of the county, some fields containing many blasted heads.

isolationists in branding the navy-for-debt exchange as fantastic and "a certain step to war."

"The President's program is already pointing to war," Holt said, "but if this plan were carried out I am certain that we would be forced into war."

All three senators agreed that the exchange would immediately place the United States in "serious difficulties," in view of reports that the French fleet is to be turned over to Germany as part of the armistice terms agreed on by the two countries.

Holt said that Germany would be almost certain to view the acquisition of French war vessels by the United States "as an act of war." Thus the United States would be put in the position of "having to defend her actions."

Wheeler and Clark asserted that under the armistice terms they doubted whether any French vessels have "escaped," but emphasized that they were ready to oppose the plan should any attempt be made to carry it out.

The plank goes on to recognize aid to these "oppressed people"—but only if such aid "is not in violation of international law, federal law, or the requirements of our own defense." It assails "utterances of the chief executive which might lead to war."

In addition, the foreign stand pledges the Republicans to uphold the Monroe Doctrine and to build up the nation's defenses.

Adoption of this foreign plank by the committee came as a distinct victory for the isolationists—a victory won after days of bitter star-chamber conferences.

THE BULLDOG HANGS ON

THE English got off to a muddling start in this war that has so far proved nearly fatal. But once started, they are determined to hang on with a grim steadiness that makes one marvel in the face of lightning military technique and lightning changes in public opinion the world over.

Two months ago Ruth Drummond, an English writer, wrote: "We have plenty of heart for the struggle. In fact, we stand unanimously behind Mr. Churchill's remark, 'We have the honor to be the enemy of Hitler and all that the Nazis stand for.'"

"We are good fighters. You see, we have tradition behind us, and that counts. It takes more than the hysterical worship of one man to make men fight. It's got to be in one's blood and bones and free will. It's got to have reverence of Christianity and motherhood and the home behind it. It's not born in the persecution of helpless Jews, in the concentration camp, in the spying of secret police. It has been proved that all this crumbles when faced with what the Nazis and Bolsheviks have left out of their list as unimportant—God, honor and courage."

The part of the world where those ideals do count has shrunk at terrifying speed. Now England stands alone, but still convinced that honor is unconquerable and that, in the words of the Prime Minister, "in the end all will come right."

Anybody far outnumbered can be trampled upon—but can such a spirit ever be really stamped out?

ALL IN THE SAME BOAT

LOW, British cartoonist, made a picture a while back which ought to be distributed among American isolationists.

It showed a boat that was sinking because of a large hole in its stern. Men in that end of the boat were bailing, valiantly but futilely.

In the bow, which thrust crazily upward, three men sat aloof. One of them was saying: "Phew! That's a nasty leak. Thank goodness, it's not at our end of the boat!"

Maybe the isolationists would say the three should never have got into a leaky boat in the first place. But that would depend on their interpretation of what the boat represented. None of us has any choice about whether or not we'll belong to the human race and whether or not we'll live our lives on this particular planet.

Whatever the political conventions may do—no umbrellas, please!

WORLD AT A GLANCE

"NEVER BEFORE" wrote a Washington news correspondent to his home newspaper the other day, following an afternoon of listening to proceedings in the senate and house of representatives, "has the American public manifested so remarkable a willingness to be taxed as at present."

This particular correspondent was by no means the only congressional observer who has noticed the average citizen's inclination to carry any financial burden that the lawmakers see fit to lay upon him in the name of national defense.

It's been recognized on Capitol Hill as a hitherto infallible rule that higher taxes mustn't even be hinted at in an election year, like this one. The political party whose spokesmen refer favorably to such a policy invariably, in the past, have suffered correspondingly from the voters' dissatisfaction, subsequently expressed at the polls.

It initially was assumed that the present situation was as usual.

That the outbreak of the blitzkrieg rendered heavy military expenditures by Uncle Sam urgently necessary generally was recognized.

Daily Washington Merry-Go-Round

BY DREW PEARSON AND ROBERT S. ALLEN

WHAT F. D. TOLD KNOX

PHILADELPHIA—Alf Landon's remark that the Stimson-Knox cabinet appointments meant that the President would not seek another term wasn't just wishful thinking. The Kansan had good grounds for saying that.

His authority was Colonel Frank Knox himself. The Chicago publisher talked freely to more than one Republican leader about his private conversation with Roosevelt when he was offered the Navy post. As they relay it, this was what Knox told them occurred:

The President began by reminding Knox that last fall, when he was first offered the Cabinet place, Knox had declined on the ground that he did not consider the emergency sufficiently acute to break his party ties. Roosevelt said he felt there now could be no question of the urgency of the situation, and therefore Knox, as a patriotic American, should no longer hesitate to give his services to his country.

Knox agreed that things were serious, and expressed his willingness to cooperate. But he felt that before entering the Cabinet he had the right to inquire about the President's political plans.

Roosevelt promptly agreed this was fair, and asked Knox what he wanted to know.

"I'd like to know," said the publisher, "whether you are going to run for a third term."

Looking Knox squarely in the eye, the President replied, "Frank, I am not a candidate."

"Then, Mr. President, why don't you say that publicly?"

Roosevelt's answer was that it would instantly destroy the influence of the U. S. Government in the extremely critical world situation. He pointed out that the country was confronted with grave problems in South America and the Far East as a result of what was happening in Europe, and that it would be very unwise for him to say anything about his plans at this time.

"May I ask," said Knox, "who is your choice for the Democratic nomination?"

Again, without hesitation, Roosevelt replied, "Cordell Hull."

SKEPTICAL GOP

Several of the GOP leaders to whom Knox related this story voiced skepticism. They pointed out that Roosevelt had not said he would not run, only that he was not a candidate.

"I am thoroughly convinced," replied Knox, "that he sincerely does not want to run."

"I don't doubt it," argued one of the leaders. "But that still would not prevent him from running. What if he is drafted? That's the big question; what will he do then? Did you ask him about that?"

Knox admitted he had not, but insisted he was convinced the President had no thought of running again.

"Maybe so," was the skeptical answer, "but he no longer has a choice. That's up to the Democrats. If they draft him, he'll run."

DIET AND HEALTH

Vertigo Yields to Food Regime

Is there any diet for vertigo?

A GREAT many middle-aged people who have progressive deafness are bothered more with the vertigo than they are with the deafness. The vertigo is due to changes in the organ of equilibrium, the semi-circular canals, which are connected with the middle ear.

A diet known as the Furstenberg Diet is based on the theory that the retention of sodium ions in the tissues of the inner ear is the cause of attacks of vertigo or Meniere's disease. The diet eliminates foods high in sodium.

The diet is as follows:
Group A—The following foods may be taken daily: Eggs, meat,

fish and fowl as described; bread as desired; cereal, one of the following—farina, oatmeal, rice, puffed rice or puffed wheat; potato and one or more servings of any of the following—(a) macaroni, (b) spaghetti, (c) rice, (d) corn, (e) cranberries, (f) prunes, (g) plums; milk as desired; vegetables and fruit daily of any fruit and of any vegetable not included in groups B and C, as desired.

Group B—Foods to be avoided: All salt meats and fish, bread, crackers and butter prepared with salt; carrots, clams, condensed milk, raisins, caviar, cowpeas, olives, spinach, cheese, endive, oysters.

Only Twice Weekly

Group C—Foods to be taken no more than twice weekly: Lima beans, buttermilk, cantaloupe, cauliflower, celery, chard, dried coconut, dried currants, dates, figs, horseradish, kohlrabi, limes, muskmelons, peanuts, peaches, mustard, pumpkin, radishes, rutabagas, strawberries, turnips, turnip tops, watercress.

Note: All foods to be prepared and served without salt.

What are the common causes of poisoning in the United States?

In children the commonest cause of poisoning is strychnine poisoning. Children get this in candy-coated or chocolate-coated cathartic pills containing strychnine along with aloes and belladonna.

Among adults the commonest cause of poisoning in the United States today is by the use of the barbiturates—hypnotics used for sleeplessness.

Unlike Former Years

This is a new development entirely different from the incidence in former years of causes of poisoning. Accidental poisoning with the barbiturates is rare although somebody sometimes takes an overdose for sleeping purposes. It is estimated that 1,200,000 grains of barbiturates are taken in the United States per year.

The number of suicide deaths due to barbiturates in 1937 was over 400.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

R. A. F.—"Please answer in your column if anything can be done for a baby with large protruding ears."

Answer—Certainly, but best let time pass and see whether the ears are protruding ten or fifteen years from now. Babies change very much. Blue-eyed ones turn into brown-eyed ones, the size of the head, the size of the ears become relatively different. If at the age of 10 or 15 the child seems to have ears so prominent they constitute a deformity, one of the simplest operations done by the plastic surgeon is to make them lie flat on the head.

Looking Back in Pickaway County

FIVE YEARS AGO

Dolores, three-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Asa Elsea of Columbus Pike, suffered bruises and shock when struck by an automobile as she followed her mother across the highway to the mail box.

The Rev. Leavitt Sherburne of St. Philip's Episcopal Church entered the contest for a position on the city board of education. He filed his petition with Harry E. Weill, clerk of the board of elections.

Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Groom and daughter, Frances, of Rochester, N. Y., removed to Circleville where they made their home in Rose Terrace, North Court Street.

10 YEARS AGO

Tom Hedges returned after a motorcycle trip through 17 states in the East and a visit in Canada.

Miss Helen Wittich was honored at a luncheon for eight at the home of Mrs. R. R. Bales, East Main Street. Miss Wittich was leaving for an extended visit in Cherokee, Ia.

After a storm of the previous day which caused damage in Pickaway County estimated at nearly $100,000, Forest cemetery was found to be among the spots damaged most severely. Twenty or more of the largest and finest trees were uprooted and others broken off in such a manner that they appeared to have been struck and splintered by lightning.

25 YEARS AGO

Miss Lillian Ella Wells became the bride of Mr. Howard Benford Moore, the wedding ceremony being solemnized in St. Philip's Episcopal Church.

The Rev. Aaron Ahn was ordained to the ministry, taking his vows at Trinity Lutheran Church.

The heaviest rainfall of the season came, one-half inch of water falling in 10 minutes.

If weasels multiplied too rapidly they would wipe out all small birds, animals and reptiles in the country. They do not become too numerous, however, largely because they destroy themselves by fighting with each other.

CHAPTER FORTY-SEVEN

ANY PERSON not in excellent mental, emotional and physical health doubtless would have cracked up right there.

But lovely Gayle Dixon just sat down for a moment in one of the hall chairs and allowed matters to sink in. She stared off sort of vacantly for a little while, orienting her thoughts. And that extra something which calm, self-disciplined people have, came to her now; it quite offset the fact that she had been in a strain of details all morning and afternoon and faced a further strain for the night. It provided just the necessary reserve for her to "take" the fact that Tempe Hyde was the thief that The Oaks had shielded.

There was a great deal she could have done. Certainly there was much she wanted to say and do, immediately. She wanted to fly to Bill, to tell Lola. To tell dear old Graham, the butler. To go to police headquarters and get details from Mrs. Holmquist. And of course to tell Jeremy, who had been brought in on the regrettable affair.

But no! No, she mustn't, because she was seeking Jeremy even now for another purpose—to start the play. Approximately 1,700 people were in their seats on the lawn, chatting amiably—but waiting. Tempe Hyde's part would have to be glossed over some way—another managerial detail for her and Bill! No, she must simply alibi quickly for Tempe's absence and help Bill go on with the play. Explanations could come later, tomorrow, perhaps.

She had been looking hurriedly for Jeremy when the interruption came, so that now, after the briefest rest to throw off her confusion, Gayle resumed her way on upstairs.

She opened the library door, but it was dark. She went then to Jeremy's bedroom and tapped on the door. When it did not open, she turned the knob and called gently through a crack, but heard no response.

She stood there thinking a moment. She remembered then that Jeremy sometimes used his grandfather's study because there were books there, and the place was cozy and nice. She turned the knob of the study door, but the light was on, but the small firelight blaze threw dancing lights and shadows. Silhouetted before the fireplace she saw Jeremy, standing, head bowed.

"Jeremy!" she spoke, walking in. "We've been looking everywhere for you!"

He turned in surprise. He held out a hand, as if in supplication, and he answered her at once. "Gayle! Gayle—I see here, I'm awfully glad you came!"

Something in his voice, some significant tone, infection, made her pause and look carefully at him. "Gayle, I see here. I've been doing an awful lot of thinking. Honestly I have. All evening longer, I guess. Things have been—well, a great many things have happened to me and—see here, Gayle, will you marry me?"

Shocked again, she could not answer, or even move.

"Will you marry me, Gayle? Son? I see here—"

He paused to swallow, hard. And in the interval they heard another sound. From around the bookcase, where the comfortable old couch was, came unmistakable footsteps, suddenly and rather energetically. In a moment Mr. Merrifield appeared, and his old face was illuminated not only by the fire, but by a definite inner excitement and stimulation.

"Jeremy!" he boomed when he approached. "I had no thought of eavesdropping, but it all happened so fast—I was resting. Nevertheless, I am delighted. I congratulate you . . . congratulate you, and—"

He was holding out a hand to shake Jeremy's and in another moment he would surely have turned benignly to Gayle.

But Gayle turned quickly and in an instant was running out of the room.

The talk between grandfather and grandson was brief, but significant. Mr. Merrifield was almost boisterous for a moment.

His plan had worked! His plan to bring Jeremy Tucker out of the mental and social doldrums. It had worked better than he had dared hope, really. With his own ears he had chanced to hear Jeremy propose marriage to Gayle, and he felt that Gayle was as nearly perfect as a young woman could be. The eccentric old fellow simply never gave thought to Gayle's own possible reactions in the matter.

"Women are likely to be upset easily, son," he counseled now. "You sort of took her by surprise. That is all. Now go on out there in the hall—you'll find her in tears, likely as not. Women are emotional creatures, Jeremy. Be gentle with her, and kind. We men never understand 'em. But you just go on out there and put your arm around her and bring her back in here. I'll get out and let you two have a talk alone!"

He ended in a chuckle, not even noticing the distress on Jeremy's face. Jeremy could say nothing, but he did move to follow his grandfather's instructions. Go bring Gayle back. That's right—that could be the thing to do. Go find Gayle. He had proposed marriage to Gayle and she had fled. He must go find her. The old man, still chuckling delightedly, had stooped over to turn on his desk lamp, so Jeremy started toward the door.

In the hallway he did not see Gayle as he expected. Nor was she in any of the other large rooms on this floor. He looked and he called her gently, moving slowly from place to place. Out the windows he heard the soft music from the orchestra entertaining the 1,700 people, but he gave little thought to that. He had no conception of time in this situation now. He couldn't have said whether the time was 6 o'clock or 8 o'clock, or 9. Actually it was 8:30—time for "The Wit to Woo" to begin—and most of the cast had assembled at the tent dressing room, ready to go on.

Hints on Etiquette

Do not make a habit of telling friends who are about to make a trip that they should look up other friends or relatives of yours when they are in their vicinity. Of course if the travelers ask if you have such friends or relatives in such and such a place, as they would like to call on them, it would be correct.

It has been proved that all this crumbles when faced with what the Nazis and Bolsheviks have left out of their list as unimportant—God, honor and courage."

The part of the world where those ideals do count has shrunk at terrifying speed. Now England stands alone, but still convinced that honor is unconquerable and that, in the words of the Prime Minister, "in the end all will come right."

Anybody far outnumbered can be trampled upon—but can such a spirit ever be really stamped out?

ALL IN THE SAME BOAT

LOW, British cartoonist, made a picture a while back which ought to be distributed among American isolationists.

It showed a boat that was sinking because of a large hole in its stern. Men in that end of the boat were bailing, valiantly but futilely.

In the bow, which thrust crazily upward, three men sat aloof. One of them was saying: "Phew! That's a nasty leak. Thank goodness, it's not at our end of the boat!"

Maybe the isolationists would say the three should never have got into a leaky boat in the first place. But that would depend on their interpretation of what the boat represented. None of us has any choice about whether or not we'll belong to the human race and whether or not we'll live our lives on this particular planet.

Whatever the political conventions may do—no umbrellas, please!

WORLD AT A GLANCE

—By—
Charles P. Stewart

"NEVER BEFORE" wrote a Washington news correspondent to his home newspaper the other day, following an afternoon of listening to proceedings in the senate and house of representatives, "has the American public manifested so remarkable a willingness to be taxed as at present."

This particular correspondent was by no means the only congressional observer who has noticed the average citizen's inclination to carry any financial burden that the lawmakers see fit to lay upon him in the name of national defense.

It's been recognized on Capitol Hill as a hitherto infallible rule that higher taxes mustn't even be hinted at in an election year, like this one. The political party whose spokesmen refer favorably to such a policy invariably, in the past, have suffered correspondingly from the voters' dissatisfaction, subsequently expressed at the polls.

It initially was assumed that the present situation was as usual.

That the outbreak of the blitzkrieg rendered heavy military expenditures by Uncle Sam urgently necessary generally was recognized.

BUT THE BILL?

But how to foot the bill was an awful puzzle to the lawmakers. Uncle Samuel owes so much already that they shrank from pledging his credit still farther. Yet the only alternative seemed to be the imposition of increased levies upon the taxpayers and in a big addition to their number, through a broadening of the income tax base.

Well, the solons were afraid to adopt this latter course. They reckoned that they simply would be guaranteeing their own political extinction in November if they offended so large a proportion of their tax-paying constituents. Various schemes were discussed, by which several of the legislators calculated they might contrive to run the country far into debt for defensive purposes under cover of some sort of bookkeeper's sleight-of-hand that would conceal the fact that they were merely running farther and farther into the red.

The plan didn't promise very well, however. For one thing, it was obvious that many people would see through it from the first. And eventually it couldn't be depended on to fool anybody except for a little while.

By this time the indications were becoming manifest that here's an instance in which the idea of higher taxation isn't resented as ordinarily it is.

Daily Washington Merry-Go-Round

BY DREW PEARSON AND ROBERT S. ALLEN

WHAT F. D. TOLD KNOX

PHILADELPHIA—Alf Landon's remark that the Stimson-Knox cabinet appointments meant that the President would not seek another term wasn't just wishful thinking. The Kansan had good grounds for saying that.

His authority was Colonel Frank Knox himself. The Chicago publisher talked freely to more than one Republican leader about his private conversation with Roosevelt when he was offered the Navy post. As they relay it, this was what Knox told them occurred:

The President began by reminding Knox that last fall, when he was first offered the Cabinet place, Knox had declined on the ground that he did not consider the emergency sufficiently acute to break his party ties. Roosevelt said he felt there now could be no question of the urgency of the situation, and therefore Knox, as a patriotic American, should no longer hesitate to give his services to his country.

Knox agreed that things were serious, and expressed his willingness to cooperate. But he felt that before entering the Cabinet he had the right to inquire about the President's political plans.

Roosevelt promptly agreed this was fair, and asked Knox what he wanted to know.

"I'd like to know," said the publisher, "whether you are going to run for a third term."

Looking Knox squarely in the eye, the President replied, "Frank, I am not a candidate."

"Then, Mr. President, why don't you say that publicly?"

Roosevelt's answer was that it would instantly destroy the influence of the U. S. Government in the extremely critical world situation. He pointed out that the country was confronted with grave problems in South America and the Far East as a result of what was happening in Europe, and that it would be very unwise for him to say anything about his plans at this time.

"May I ask," said Knox, "who is your choice for the Democratic nomination?"

Again, without hesitation, Roosevelt replied, "Cordell Hull."

SKEPTICAL GOP

Several of the GOP leaders to whom Knox related this story voiced skepticism. They pointed out that Roosevelt had not said he would not run, only that he was not a candidate.

"I am thoroughly convinced," replied Knox, "that he sincerely does not want to run."

"I don't doubt it," argued one of the leaders. "But that still would not prevent him from running. What if he is drafted? That's the big question; what will he do then? Did you ask him about that?"

Knox admitted he had not, but insisted he was convinced the President had no thought of running again.

"Maybe so," was the skeptical answer, "but he no longer has a choice. That's up to the Democrats. If they draft him, he'll run."

DIET AND HEALTH

Vertigo Yields to Food Regime

Is there any diet for vertigo?

● A GREAT many middle-aged people who have progressive deafness are bothered more with the vertigo than they are with the deafness. The vertigo is due to changes in the organ of equilibrium, the semi-circular canals, which are connected with the middle ear.

A diet known as the Furstenberg Diet is based on the theory that the retention of sodium ions in the tissues of the inner ear is the cause of attacks of vertigo or Meniere's disease. The diet eliminates foods high in sodium.

The diet is as follows:
Group A—The following foods may be taken daily: Eggs, meat,

Dr. Glendening will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

fish and fowl as described; bread as desired; cereal, one of the following—farina, oatmeal, rice, puffed rice or puffed wheat; potato and one or more servings of any of the following—(a) macaroni, (b) spaghetti, (c) rice, (d) corn, (e) cranberries, (f) prunes, (g) plums; milk as desired; vegetables and fruit daily of any fruit and of any vegetable not included in groups B and C, as desired.

Group B—Foods to be avoided: All salt meats and fish, bread, crackers and butter prepared with salt; carrots, clams, condensed milk, raisins, caviar, cowpeas, olives, spinach, cheese, endive, oysters.

Only Twice Weekly

Group C—Foods to be taken no more than twice weekly: Lima beans, beets, buttermilk, cantaloup, cauliflower, celery, chard, dried coconut, dried currants, dates, figs, horseradish, kohlrabi, limes, muskmelons, peanuts, peaches, mustard, pumpkin, radishes, rutabagas, strawberries, turnips, turnip tops, watercress.

Note: All foods to be prepared and served without salt.

What are the common causes of poisoning in the United States?

In children the commonest cause of poisoning is strychnine poisoning. Children get this in candy-coated or chocolate-coated cathartic pills containing strychnine along with aloes and belladonna.

Among adults the commonest cause of poisoning in the United States today is by the use of the barbiturates—hypnotics used for sleeplessness.

Unlike Former Years

This is a new development entirely different from the incidence in former years of causes of poisoning. Accidental poisoning with the barbiturates is rare although somebody sometimes takes an overdose for sleeping purposes. It is estimated that 1,200,000,000 grains of barbiturates are taken in the United States per year.

The number of suicide deaths due to barbiturates in 1937 was over 400.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

R. A. F.—"Please answer in your column if anything can be done for a baby with large protruding ears."

Answer—Certainly, but best let time pass and see whether the ears are protruding ten or fifteen years from now. Babies change very much. Blue-eyed ones turn into brown-eyed ones, the size of the head, the size of the ears become relatively different. If at the age of 10 or 15 the child seems to have ears so prominent they constitute a deformity, one of the simplest operations done by the plastic surgeon is to make them lie flat on the head.

For any one pamphlet desired, send 10 cents in coin, and a self-addressed envelope stamped with a three-cent stamp, to Dr. Glendening, in care of this paper. Looking Back in Pickaway County

FIVE YEARS AGO

Dolores, three-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Asa Elisea of Columbus Pike, suffered bruises and shock when struck by an automobile as she followed her mother across the highway to the mail box.

The Rev. Leavitt Sherburne of St. Philip's Episcopal Church entered the contest for a position on the city board of education. He filed his petition with Harry E. Weill, clerk of the board of elections.

Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Groom and daughter, Frances, of Rochester, N. Y., removed to Circleville where they made their home in Rose Terrace, North Court Street.

10 YEARS AGO

Tom Hedges returned after a motorcycle trip through 17 states in the East and a visit in Canada.

Miss Helen Wittich was honored at a luncheon for eight at the home of Mrs. R. R. Bates, East Main Street. Miss Wittich was leaving for an extended visit in Cherokee, Ia.

After a storm of the previous day which caused damage in Pickaway County estimated at nearly $100,000, Forest cemetery was found to be among the spots damaged most severely. Twenty or more of the largest and finest trees were uprooted and others broken off in such a manner that they appeared to have been struck and splintered by lightning.

25 YEARS AGO

Miss Lillian Ella Wells became the bride of Mr. Howard Benford Moore, the wedding ceremony being solemnized in St. Philip's Episcopal Church.

The Rev. Aaron Ahn was ordained to the ministry, taking his vows at Trinity Lutheran Church.

The heaviest rainfall of the season came, one-half inch of water falling in 10 minutes.

If weasels multiplied too rapidly they would wipe out all small birds, animals and reptiles in the country. They do not become too numerous, however, largely because they destroy themselves by fighting with each other.

CHAPTER FORTY-SEVEN

ANY PERSON not in excellent mental, emotional and physical health doubtless would have cracked up right there.

But lovely Gayle Dixon just sat down for a moment in one of the hall chairs and allowed matters to sink in. She stared off sort of vacantly for a little while, orienting her thoughts. And that extra something which calm, self-disciplined people have, came to her now; it quite offset the fact that she had been in a strain of details all morning and afternoon and faced a further strain for the night. It provided just the necessary reserve for her to "take" the fact that Tempe Hyde was the thief that The Oaks had shielded.

There was a great deal she could have done. Certainly there was much she wanted to say and do, immediately. She wanted to fly to Bill, to tell Lola. To tell dear old Graham, the butler. To go to police headquarters and get details from Mrs. Holmquist. And of course to tell Jeremy, who had been brought in on the regrettable affair.

But no! No, she mustn't, because she was seeking Jeremy even now for another purpose—to start the play. Approximately 1,700 people were in their seats on the lawn, chatting amiably—but waiting. Tempe Hyde's part would have to be glossed over some way—another managerial detail for her and Bill! No, she must simply alibi quickly for Tempe's absence and help Bill go on with the play. Explanations could come later, tomorrow, perhaps.

She had been looking hurriedly for Jeremy when the interruption came, so that now, after the briefest rest to throw off her confusion, Gayle resumed her way on upstairs.

She opened the library door, but it was dark. She went then to Jeremy's bedroom and tapped on the door. When it did not open, she turned the knob and called gently through a crack, but heard no response.

She stood there thinking a moment. She remembered then that Jeremy sometimes used his grandfather's study because there were books there, and the place was cozy and nice. She turned the knob of the study door. No light was on, but the small fireplace blaze threw dancing lights and shadows. Silhouetted before the fireplace she saw Jeremy, standing, head bowed.

"Jeremy!" she spoke, walking in. "We've been looking everywhere for you!"

He turned in surprise. He held out a hand, as if in supplication, and he answered her in a low, awfully glad voice.

"Gayle! Gayle—I see here, I'm awfully glad you came!"

Something in his voice, some significant tone inflection, made her pause and look carefully at him.

"Gayle, I—see here, I've been doing an awful lot of thinking. Honestly, I have. All evening longer, I guess. Things have been—well, a great many things have happened to me and—see here, Gayle, will you marry me?"

Shocked again, she could not answer, or even move.

"Will you marry me, Gayle? Soon? I—see here—"

He paused to swallow, hard. And in the interval they heard another sound. From around the bookcase, where the comfortable old couch was, came unmistakable footsteps, suddenly and rather energetically. In a moment Mr. Merrifield appeared, and his old face was illumined not only by the fire, but by a definite inner excitement and stimulation.

"Jeremy!" he boomed when he approached. "I had no thought of eavesdropping, but it all happened so fast—I was resting. Nevertheless, I am delighted. I congratulate you . . . congratulate you, and—"

He was holding out a hand to shake Jeremy's and in another moment he would surely have turned benignly to Gayle.

But Gayle turned quickly and in an instant was running out of the room.

The talk between grandfather and grandson was brief, but significant. Mr. Merrifield was almost boisterous for a moment.

His plan had worked! His plan to bring Jeremy Tucker out of the mental and social doldrums. It had worked better than he had dared hope, really. With his own ears he had chanced to hear Jeremy propose marriage to Gayle, and he felt that Gayle was as nearly perfect as a young woman could be. The eccentric old fellow simply never gave thought to Gayle's own possible reactions in the matter.

"Women are likely to be upset easily, son," he counseled now. "You sort of took her by surprise. That is all. Now go on out there in the hall—you'll find her in tears, likely as not. Women are emotional creatures, Jeremy. Be gentle with her, and kind. We men never understand 'em. But you just go on out there and put your arm around her and bring her back in here. I'll congratulate her, and then I'll get out and let you two have a talk alone!"

He ended in a chuckle, not even noticing the distress on Jeremy's face. Jeremy could say nothing, but he did move to follow his grandfather's instructions. Right—Gayle back. That's right—that would be the thing to do. Go find Gayle. He had proposed marriage to Gayle and she had fled. He must go find her. The old man, still chuckling delightedly, had stooped over to turn on his desk lamp, so Jeremy started toward the door.

In the hallway he did not see Gayle as he expected. Nor was she in any of the other large rooms on this floor. He looked and he called her gently, moving slowly from place to place. Out the windows he heard the soft music from the orchestra entertaining the 1,700 people, but he gave little thought to that. He had no conception of time in this situation now. He couldn't have said whether the time was 8 o'clock or 8 o'clock, or 9. Actually it was 8:30—time for "The Wit to Woo" to begin—and most of the cast had assembled at the tent dressing room, ready to go on.

But all the principals were missing.

Nearly 10 minutes had passed before Jeremy walked slowly downstairs and came onto Gayle again. She was near the side doorway and she was sobbing—and she was leaning on Bill Bailey's shoulder and being held tightly in Bill's arms. As if he were a man in a trance, Jeremy came up to them.

"All right, Tucker!" Bill began firmly. "You said or did something that made this girl cry, and you can't get away with that. I don't know exactly what the score is between us, but I'm telling you here and now that I'm in love with Gayle Dixon, and hereafter it's a man-to-man fight. You understand that? I mean what I said. You and your whole confounded fortune can't stop me, nor anything else if Gayle will give me a chance! I'm chucking this job. I don't want but one thing in life—a chance to win you, Gayle—and somewhere else I can get interesting work that isn't as hair-brained as this if Tucker here has insulted you or—"

"I mean it! I mean it's going to be man to man! I've held off, Gayle, because I don't like to play dirt on any man. I won't yet. But I'm serving notice. The only person who can stop me is you, Gayle, and you're going to have a hard time."

"Bill!" She had stopped sobbing, and she grabbed his big shoulders to shake him, her pretty face tear-touched and drawn in what surely was combined pleasure and pain. But he was not looking at her. He moved almost roughly now, a man with his mind made up, set on a definite goal.

"You said the old gent was upstaging me, speaking firmly and rather fast. 'We're going to him, I'm resigning, here and now, and I'm telling him so. Then I—'"

"Oh, I say—see here, Bill—I'm Jeremy tried to interrupt.

"I'm not joking or anything of the sort." He was striding up the stairs now, Gayle and Jeremy near and trying to talk to him both at once.

Their youthful voices made a veritable wrangling as they entered the study again. Mr. Merrifield looked up in some surprise.

"Come in, young friends, and—" But they scarcely heard him.

Gayle held to one arm, Jeremy tugged lightly, nervously, at Bill's other. Bill's face was flushed now. "Play or no play, I'm done, I'm done," he kept declaring. "When I make up my mind to something—"

"SIR!" Old Mr. Merrifield could roar, when necessary. He roared now, and quite interrupted the others. A sudden silence reigned, and Gayle broke it.

"Make him behave, Mr. Merrifield! He doesn't understand a lot of things! I—I just hate him! I mean I love him! I love him, Mr. Merrifield! We have come to explain that we can't—oh . . . Mr. Merrifield!"

She quite lost her words in sobbing again, and again Bill Bailey held her very close to him and petted her and fondled her hair, glaring defiantly at the rich grandfather and grandson.

Sorority Installs New Officers, Hears Reports

Mrs. Frank Marion was installed as president of Phi Beta Psi Sorority Tuesday when officers were inducted at the home of Mrs. Linden Baughman, South Court Street. Miss Margaret Hunsicker presided during the ceremonies. Others seated were Miss Helen Liston, vice president; Miss Elizabeth Tolbert, treasurer; Miss Annie Boone, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Delos Marcy, mistress of ceremonies, and Miss Peggy Parks, editor.

Mrs. Dudley Carpenter was appointed recording secretary by the new president who also named Mrs. Baughman parliamentarian.

Mrs. Marion named her standing committees for the coming year including charity, Miss Hunsicker, Mrs. David Goldschmidt, and Mrs. Marcy; program, Miss Tolbert, Miss Liston, Mrs. Carpenter and Mrs. Carroll Hughes; finance, Miss Parks, Miss Pearl Marshall and Mrs. Willis Liston.

It was decided that the sorority would picnic in July, the committee in charge including Miss Wilmina Phebus, Miss Hunsicker and Miss Parks.

Mrs. Carpenter and Miss Liston, who represented the chapter at the recent National Convention at Colorado Springs, presented the following report:

"Seventy-seven sorority sisters were housed during the convention at the beautiful Broadmoor Hotel 53 being delegates. All sessions of the convention were held in the hotel.

"The first day was devoted to registration and arrival of delegates with a visit to the Ice Palace as a treat for the evening. Following the Tuesday morning breakfast, the delegation enjoyed a day's sight-seeing trip to Pike's Peak which ended with an outdoor steak roast at Fishers Canyon on Cheyenne Mountain. Wednesday morning a business session was taken up with the inauguration of an annual national project. This year the national organization will purchase an iron lung for presentation to a worthy city. A committee was appointed to make the investigation and selection.

"Mrs. Ruth Schumann of Vero Beach, Fla., was installed as national president.

"The formal dinner and dance in the hotel ballroom was the highlight of the social features and was held Wednesday night, the convention adjourning Thursday morning."

The chapter voted donations to both the Boy and Girl Scouts of the county.

The out-going officers served a delightful lunch during the social hour.

5th columns in the lawn

Again and again, just when the home gardener comes to the conclusion that at least he has achieved a perfect, weedless lawn, the "fifth column" appears and trouble ensues. The fifth column of the home lawn is the spindly stem of the buckhorn, or narrow leaf plantain, a weed that persists in sowing "seeds of dissension" among the best of grasses.

Among the ways of controlling this weed are: pulling it up by hand after the ground has been softened by rain; cutting the main root of the plant well below the surface of the soil, and piercing each plant to the root with a sharp-pointed stick which has been dipped in sulphuric acid, carbolic acid, or gasoline.

As shown in today's Garden-Graph, the seed heads of buckhorn are atop long, spindly stems. It is a mistake to cut these stems with a lawn mower, for the blades of the mower merely stir the seeds from the stem and scatter them throughout the lawn.

When hand digging weeds from lawns, mark off strips about three feet wide with string and stakes. Then clear each strip of weeds before moving on to the next one.

The liver should pour out two pints of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food may not digest. It may just decay in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. You feel sour, sunk and the world looks lunk.

It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these two pints of bile flowing freely to make you feel "up and up." Amazing in making bile flow freely. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name. 10¢ and 25¢. Stubbornly refuse anything else.

5th columns in the lawn

Again and again, just when the home gardener comes to the conclusion that at least he has achieved a perfect, weedless lawn, the "fifth column" appears and trouble ensues. The fifth column of the home lawn is the spindly stem of the buckhorn, or narrow leaf plantain, a weed that persists in sowing "seeds of dissension" among the best of grasses.

Among the ways of controlling this weed are: pulling it up by hand after the ground has been softened by rain; cutting the main root of the plant well below the surface of the soil, and piercing each plant to the root with a sharp-pointed stick which has been dipped in sulphuric acid, carbolic acid, or gasoline.

As shown in today's Garden-Graph, the seed heads of buckhorn are atop long, spindly stems. It is a mistake to cut these stems with a lawn mower, for the blades of the mower merely strip the seeds from the stem and scatter them throughout the lawn.

When hand digging weeds from lawns, mark off strips about three feet wide with string and stakes. Then clear each strip of weeds before moving on to the next one.

TOUGH HOMBRES, THESE TWO WHO BATTLE TUESDAY

By Lawton Carver

NEW YORK, June 26 — With Joe Louis among those who pick Max Baer to beat Tony Galento on Tuesday night of next week in the Jersey City ball park we can offer today in rebuttal to the heavyweight champion's forecast that a majority are going to string along with Galento in keeping with the betting odds that slightly favor him. Having done that, we are going to present the following facts, factors and figures of the situation for the benefit of those who are interested, if any.

The fight is going to bring together two of the hardest hitters ever to clamber into a ring, but also two gentlemen who for vastly different reasons never could attain greatness even when they were good. Galento never was anything more than a clumsy puncher and in his years of campaigning blew decisions to gents long since forgotten. But he always had plenty of heart and toughness.

Baer never used the finer points of boxing either and he, too, was hard to hurt, and might have gone on to a place beside the best of them, but he lacked heart.

Both have been handy with a tankard or goblet through most of their lives, with the result that Baer went over his peak long before he should have after winning the championship. Galento still has his beer when the notion strikes him and as of today, six days before the fight, he weighs approximately 240 pounds. He says that's all right, and he will do about 235 and be fit. Baer is in as good shape as he will ever be at around 220.

Galento cuts easily but doesn't mind it as long as he can see through the blood. Baer is hard to cut, but won't go beyond the first rip in the hide about his mouth or eyes.

Both men have been knocked out by Louis and one or the other will get it again in September, depending on who wins.

Both are well fixed for life financially, family men, past 30 years and either can talk a better fight than both of them together can put up.

All of which tells just about everything except who will win the fight. And by the way, who will?

ALICE MARBLE FAVORED IN TRI-STATE TOURNEY

CINCINNATI, June 26 — Alice Marble, Number 1 ranking woman world's tennis player, today was a top heavy favorite to capture the annual tri-state tournament.

Miss Marble eased through her match against Mrs. Dorothy Hinkle in the first round, 6-0, 6-1 and then pleased the large gallery with a one-set exhibition victory over Marshall Chambers, Cincinnati, state high school champion.

Former national champion Bobby Riggs, breezed through his first round match with Bob Trautman, Cincinnati, 6-0, 6-1, while Chambers had to come from behind to beat Robert Ehrman, 3-6, 6-1, 6-3.

In the first real surprise of the tourney, Miss Monica Nolan, Ohio Valley number one ranked player, scored an upset victory over Mrs. Edna Smith Shalala, nationally ranked star from Cleveland, by scores of 6-3, 2-6, 6-3.

The doubles were to start today in both men's and women's divisions.

Cubs Provide Test For Redlegs Next Weekend

CINCINNATI, June 26—Fireworks over the week end in Cincinnati will not be confined to the regular pre-game show that takes place at Crosley Field before each night game. There will be fireworks all through the series the Reds and Chicago Cubs will play starting with their night game Friday, and continuing through a ladies' day game Saturday and a doubleheader Sunday.

The night game Friday will mark the Reds' first appearance at home in two weeks, and they're not picking any soft customer to meet on their homecoming. The Cubs, with the batting power that Rookie Bill Nicholson has added to them, are now a formidable offensive machine that will attempt to climb right back into the middle of the pennant fight by knocking off the champions.

JIM McDONALD ELECTED AS SPRINGFIELD COACH

SPRINGFIELD, June 26 — James McDonald, former Ohio State University football captain and basketball star, has been named coach at Springfield Public High School, it was announced today. He succeeds Allen Compton.

preceding Friday night's game, there will be a combined exhibition by the Franklin and Lebanon High School bands, and a concert by Smittie's Military Band for the early comers.

All seats in the grandstand will be reserved for the night game, leaving the bleachers available as unreserved. On Sunday, 14,000 general admission grandstand and bleacher tickets will be available for those who do not obtain their tickets in advance. This is in accordance with the Reds' new policy. When the regular reserved sections are placed on sale as reserved seats at the regular general admission price. This is not in effect on Sundays or holidays, when, regardless of weather there is a sellout of the regular reserved seats, 14,000 general admission seats will be available at the park when the gates open.

Following the Sunday twin bill, the Reds will go to St. Louis for an afternoon game Monday and a night game Tuesday. Wednesday will be an off day, whereupon the Reds will return to Cincinnati for an afternoon twin bill against Pittsburgh July 4 and a ladies' day game on July 5.

GLITTS TO PLAY FERGUSON TEAM FRIDAY 9 P. M.

The Glitt softball team of Circleville, leading the Chillicothe night league with a perfect record, takes on one of the greatest teams in the Midwest Friday evening under the Chillicothe lights when it goes against the Columbus Ferguson Auditors.

The Ferguson team won the Ohio title last year and was runnerup for national honors. The Auditors have a well-balanced team, including Ralph Solt, who hurled three consecutive no-hitters in the national competition last year; Bill Hickie, Jimmy Strausbaugh, Bill Phillips, Gabby Dixon, Johnny Brown, Harold George, Adam Schumacher, Allen Remaly, George Sunker and Peter Hiller.

The Glitt team has an unblemished record this year with Fowler, Hegele and Leasure turning in some brilliant pitching. Fowler or Hegele will likely hurl against the Auditors, with Leasure slated to take the mound Wednesday evening against the Phalanx team in league competition.

Friday night's game is on the books for 9 o'clock.

YANK NINE DOWN IN DUMPS, HEAT GOTHAM CIRCLES

McCarthy Men Drop 5-3 Decision In Five Rainy Innings

Cubs Club Five Marked In 13th To Defeat Dodger Crew

By Pat Robinson

NEW YORK, June 26—It's hard to believe western reports that the Yanks have their daubers down.

It is doubly hard to believe for two reasons: First, because the Yanks are a world's championship club and have been for four straight years and such clubs usually don't lose either their poise or their courage.

Second, the club is led by Joe McCarthy and Joe is the last man in the world to stand for any player quitting on him.

Nevertheless, it is apparent there is something radically wrong with the Yanks.

Maybe McCarthy will be able to get them clicking again eventually but it had better be soon. They are now 10 games off the pace as a result of the Indians' 5-3, 5-inning, rain-shortened victory yesterday.

Meanwhile the Tigers and Red Sox were battling to a draw in a doubleheader. Jack Wilson won the opener for Boston, 11-7.

Hal Newhouse, Detroit's precocious 19-year-old ace, won the nightcap, 5 to 1.

In the only other day game, the Pirates got a 9-7 verdict over the Phils.

The Brooklyn Dodgers lost a chance to get nearer first place in the National League when they were crushed 8 to 3 by the Chicago Cubs in the 13th inning of a night game.

In the two American League night games, St. Louis defeated Philadelphia 12 to 10 and Washington bested Chicago 7 to 6.

McCarthy Men Drop 5- Decision In Five Rainy Innings

Cubs Club Five Markers In 13th To Defeat Dodger Crew

By Pat Robinson

NEW YORK, June 26—It's hard to believe western reports that the Yanks have their dauber down.

It is doubly hard to believe for two reasons: First, because the Yanks are a world's championship club and have been for four straight years and such club usually don't lose either their poise or their courage.

Second, the club is led by Joe McCarthy and Joe is the last man in the world to stand for any player quitting on him.

Nevertheless, it is apparent there is something radically wrong with the Yanks.

Maybe McCarthy will be able to get them clicking again eventually but it had better be soon. They are now 10 games off the pace as a result of the Indians' 5-3, 5-inning, rain-shortened victory yesterday.

Meanwhile the Tigers and Red Sox were battling to a draw in a doubleheader. Jack Wilson won the opener for Boston, 11-7.

Hal Newhouse, Detroit's precocious 19-year-old ace, won the nightcap, 5 to 1.

In the only other day game, the Pirates got a 9-7 verdict over the Phils.

The Brooklyn Dodgers lost a chance to get nearer first place in the National League when they were crushed 8 to 3 by the Chicago Cubs in the 13th inning of a night game.

In the two American League night games, St. Louis defeated Philadelphia 12 to 10 and Washington bested Chicago 7 to 6.

DIRECTORS TOLD TO TAKE ACTION TO AID PROJECT

Options Already Held, And Final Steps To Be Made During Present Week

DEVELOPMENT STRESSED

Colonel J. B. Wood, Claudia Grant Land To Comprise Part Of Public Park

Development of Circleville's north-end recreation ground took a new turn Tuesday evening when directors of the Chamber of Commerce voted to buy an additional seven acres of land adjoining the 13½ acres of park ground previously purchased by the Elks Lodge soliciting committee. A motion was passed by the directors, empowering the president, vice-president and the secretary-treasurer to execute necessary measures for the purchase of the land. It is believed that by the end of the week such measures will have been completed.

The seven acres, directly north of the present recreation ground on the opposite side of Rosewood Avenue, increases the size of the playground to more than 20 acres. Half the land to be purchased includes the Colonel J. B. Wood property, with two houses, and the other half the property of Claudia V. Grant, Akron. Mack Parrett, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, stated that the Chamber had recently received options on both properties.

The purchase price was not revealed.

Action taken by the directors followed a Chamber of Commerce luncheon meeting at the American Hotel Hurricane in which members of the organization voted to give the directors authority to take action on the measure.

Ray Rowland, president of the Chamber, pointed out that he believed the move would not only give Circleville children a bigger and better recreation ground, but would also aid greatly the development of the city's north-end district.

PICKAWAY CLUB JURY REFUSES INVITES PUBLIC MERCY FOR TWO TO PLAY GOLF THEFT SUSPECTS

Officials of the Pickaway Country Club met Tuesday evening and decided to throw the golf course open for all residents of Circleville and Pickaway County during the month of July in an effort to get more persons acquainted with the golf links. Any persons who wish to play golf may do so during that month on payment of the club's regular green fees.

Dr. G. D. Phillips, president of the Club, said Wednesday that the plan is being adopted to show more persons the excellent course and to try to develop more golfers who may eventually become members of the Club.

The club's green fees are 50 cents for nine holes and 75 cents for 18 holes during the week, and 75 cents for nine holes and $1 for 18 holes on holidays and Sundays.

Elmer Whitt, 30, and Marion Phillips, 33, charged with a $30,000 Cincinnati bank robbery, and the former identified by Circleville bank authorities as one of the five men who robbed the Circleville Savings and Banking Company December 5, were faced with life imprisonment in Ohio Penitentiary Tuesday when Criminal Court Judge Dudley M. Outcalt refused to recommend mercy.

The evidence was presented before Judge Outcalt after Whitt and Phillips waived a jury hearing.

Since a motion for a new trial will be heard Monday, Judge Outcalt has delayed the sentence until then.

LATIN SCHOLAR

Governor Arthur James, Pennsylvania's freckled dark horse, got off to a bad start in making an impression on the convention. The delegates had a big laugh at his expense while his managers were in the midst of strenuous efforts to boost his stock.

James was a guest speaker at a big Philadelphia high school commencement, and to the startled surprise of the 5,700 young graduates read them a lecture on their scholastic failings.

"The trouble with you students," he said serenely, "is that you don't know any Latin. Take my high school motto, 'omnia labora vincas.' You don't know what it means. It means, 'labor conquers all things.'"

A burst of derisive laughter greeted this sally and James, looking puzzled, sat down. He was enlightened a few minutes later by Supreme Court Justice Owen J. Roberts, also on the program. "They taught Latin in my day, too," the tall, handsome jurist said with a smile. "And the way I was taught that motto was, 'labor omnia vincit.'"

The big throng broke into a roar of appreciative laughter.

AIR CORPS HAS PLACES FOR 907, HODGES SAYS

COLUMBUS, June 26—The U.S. Army Air Corps has openings for 907 young men in Ohio, Indiana, Kentucky and West Virginia, it is announced by Brigadier General Campbell B. Hodges, commanding this area.

Applicants must be from 18 to 35 years of age, single, without dependents and have at least a high school education. Each must also meet Army Air Corps mental and physical requirements.

These students, upon enlistment in the Army, will be sent to Maxwell Field, near Montgomery, Alabama, and to Valparaiso, near Tampa, Florida, for an extensive and intensive course of training.

This newest authorization provides a 5th Corps Area quota of about 4,000 for various arms and services of the army before August 31.

"We have had many inquiries about opportunities in the Army Air Corps. Now, here are openings—first come, first served," General Hodges declared.
